(LVIIIth YEAR.) THE (No. 2912.)

MARYLAND GAZETTE.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1802.

BERNE, August 30.

WE hear at this moment that the insurgents have just begun hostilities. They have taken the post of the Rengg, which was occupied by a company of carabiniers of the canton de Vaud. The captain and about thirty men have perished in that action. No precise accounts of this unfortunate event have as yet been received: but it appears that this post has suffered itself to be surprised, and that the insurgents have easily rendered themselves masters of it by taking possession of a height that commanded it, and which had been left unguarded.

On hearing the news, general Andermatt and the commissary of government Keller gave orders for all the Helvetic forces to advance. They have addressed a last proclamation to the inhabitants of Uri, Schwitz and Untervalden, summoning them to submit to the government; but things are come to such a pitch, that there is no probability of this summons producing any effect.

PARIS, September 3.

The Russian troops which were at Naples, departed from thence the 9th August, for Corfu. A Russian frigate will convoy the transports on board of which the troops have embarked.

The Italian government has ordered that the happy event of the proclamation of the consulship for life of Buonaparte shall be celebrated at Milan, on the 26th August, by a Te Deum, races and illuminations.

September 6.

According to reports brought by some vessels arrived at Leghorn the latter end of August, the French squadron sent to Tunis to demand satisfaction of the regency for the insult offered to a captain of a French vessel, and to the commerce of France in general, has summoned the dey, in the name of the first consul, to pay as an actual indemnity the sum of 200,000 colonnari; and in future an annual contribution of 60,000 colonnari; in case of refusal, the French government threaten the dey to declare war against him without delay.—Other French men of war, dispatched to Algiers, were to make summons equally menacing; amongst others, that of instantly setting free all the slaves, of whatever nation, now to be found in the Algerine territory. Should the bey refuse to adhere to these conditions, the ships of war have orders to blockade the port.

That part of the dukedom of Cleves, situated on the left of the Rhine, is, it is asserted, about being ceded to the Batavian republic for ten millions of florins.

September 9.

A report prevails that the ex-general La Fayette, has died at one of his estates in Brie.

The signing of the treaty of peace between France and the Porte, was announced the day before yesterday at the theatres. At noon, a discharge of cannon testified the public joy on this happy event.

Accounts from Vienna announce several changes in the ministry, and likewise in the other departments of administration.

The reports from Switzerland are less alarming.—A deputy from the lesser cantons arrived at Berne on the 3d inst. requesting from government a passport and a safe conduct for six deputies, which their cantons propose to send to Berne. The request was granted.

Gen. Le Clerc has sent to France an American Tyger. It is his intention to send some enormous Alligators dried and stuffed. One has been taken 29 feet long in the pond of Marigoane. This general has given orders to an officer on a travelling excursion through South-America to send him Vigogna sheep, lamas, and every other kind of animals, which are not in the national museum. Should any vegetable, mineral or animal production be found in St. Domingo, which are not in our national collections, gen. Le Clerc will do all in his power to procure and forward them.

September 11.

It is announced that Sabastiani chief of brigade is to be sent by government to Algiers.—This is the same officer who carried the preliminaries of peace between France and Turkey to Constantinople. His mission to the most formidable and commercial of the Barbarian powers, gives room to suspect that government is occupied with plans not only beneficial to France but to all the states bordering on the Mediterranean.

Four persons, one of whom was a woman about 28 years of age, after having been exposed yesterday, for four hours at the Place de Greve, were publicly branded on the right shoulder with the letter F. (Faussaire) counterfeiter. This is the first punishment of the kind that has taken place in France since the abolition of the ancient penal code.

The greatest activity has prevailed at Ostend for a fortnight past, repairing the dykes, and enlarging the basons of that port.

The vaccine committee of the medical society of Paris has addressed, by the authority of the minister of the interior, a letter to all the prefects on the importance of this method of inoculation, and the necessity of practising it in all the departments, where the ignorant alone still oppose its introduction.

Gen. Bernadotte, we understand, arrived at Nancy the 3d inst. at ten o'clock at night.

The queen of Naples with the princesses, her daughters, and her numerous suite, arrived at Naples the 17th August.

The preparations making by the court of Spain, for the journey of the royal family, will cost it is said several millions. Upwards of 400 carriages filled with the paraphernalia of the court, were dispatched from Madrid the beginning of August. The feasts which are to take place at Barcelona, will recal by their taste and magnificence the sports and tournaments of the ancient Kings of Castile and Leon.

The king of Prussia has promised to establish in his dominions the secularized bishops whose estates have been ceded to him.

FRENCH REPUBLIC.

ACTS OF GOVERNMENT.

Report made to the first consul, in senate, by the minister for exterior relations, the 20th Fructidor (7th Sept.) year 10.

The first consul having ordered me to render him an account, in senate, of the differences which have lately happened between the French republic and the regency of Algiers, and of the success attending the measures which have been taken to terminate them, I ought previously to recal the state of affairs which preceded them.

From the frontiers of Egypt to the Strait of Gibraltar, the north of Africa is possessed by a people, strangers to the public code of Europe. The principles and manners, which, if we may be allowed the expression, combine the different European powers into one society, which not only prohibit oppression, but enjoin kind reception, protection and assistance in case of danger, to the navigation and commerce of a peaceable people; which reprove every unjust aggression; which tarnish that valour that is attended with cruelty, and which desire that the rights of humanity should always remain sacred: these manners are still unknown to the people of those countries.

They acknowledge no other right of nations than the laws of their own police, which permitting amongst themselves individual violences, authorise them with respect to foreigners, and even consecrate them as acts of courage towards enemies. They are ignorant that the law of nations, by its general rules, abolishes those general rights, which a people too much inflated with their local importance, pretend to infer from the licence of their usages. It is to be believed, for the honour of Europe, that in this respect the supremacy of the law of nations, assigning just limits to the toleration of particular legislations, shall not, henceforward, be contemned, excepting in Africa.

The regency of Algiers is particularly remarkable for an audacity which certain events must have increased.

Charles the Vth turned against Africa his victorious arms. He wished to deliver Europe from the incursions of Barbarians, by reducing them to insignificance; but the event deceived him, and did not answer to the grandeur of his preparations.

In late times, Louis XIVth avenged on the Algerines the honour of the French flag. Algiers by his orders, was bombarded three times in the space of six years; but here his vengeance was bounded. The affairs of Europe exacted all his attention. The Algerines, by this circumstance, however, learned from that period to respect France, and the peace, which was concluded in 1689, subsisted above a century, when the instances and orders of the Sublime Porte caused it in the year 7, to be broken.

Of the enemies which remained to France, when the first consul assumed the reins of government, the regency of Algiers was the least formidable. The first consul, anxious to extinguish every where the calamities of war, apprized that the dey of Algiers had declared war against his inclination, and was desirous of peace, sent a negotiator to Algiers, preceded by the renown of those exploits of which Italy, Germany, Egypt and Syria had been the theatre; the first consul's envoy was received as he ought to have been. Peace was decreed and even proclaimed in the divan.—However, a new interposition of the Sublime Porte, postponed the signature. War appeared to recommence, but it was a war without hostilities. All the French were permitted, freely, to retire from Algiers with all their property, and the agent of France waited at Alicant for the moment when negotiations could be resumed.

In short, a definitive treaty which assures to France all the advantages stipulated by the ancient treaties, and which by new stipulations guarantees more explicitly and fully the liberty of French commerce and navigation with Algiers, was signed the 7th of last Nivose.

The general peace was concluded, and commerce began to resume its accustomed routine.

But very soon we learned, that Algerine armaments over-run the Mediterranean, desolating the commerce of France and infesting its coasts. Even the flag and territory of the French republic was not respected by the corsairs of the regency. They carried into Algiers transports which sailed from Toulon destined for St. Domingo, they seized a Neapolitan vessel in the seas, and almost within the banks of France. An Algerine rais dared, in the road of Tunis, to make a captain of a French merchantman submit to infamous treatment. The barks of the coral company, which agreeable to the terms of the treaty, went to fish for coral, were violently driven from the coast. The charge d'affaires in vain demanded satisfaction: they had the presumption to make him propositions injurious to the dignity of the French nation—that France should purchase the execution of the treaty!

Informed of these aggressions, the first consul ordered a naval division to sail for Algiers.

I transmit by his orders, the instructions to the charge d'affaires, the citizen Dubois Thainville, who deported himself with as much energy and dignity, as he conducted with prudence.

The division commanded by the contre-admiral Leissegues, appeared before Algiers the 17th Thermidor, adjutant-commander Hullin an officer of the palace was on board, the bearer of a letter from the first consul to the dey.

On the 18th, this officer went on shore, was received with distinction, presented to the dey and delivered the first consul's letter, which was conceived in the following terms:

"Buonaparte, first consul, to the very high and very magnificent dey of Algiers; whom God preserve in prosperity and glory.

"I write you this letter direct, because I know that you have ministers who deceive you, and who induce you to conduct yourself in a manner that may bring upon you the greatest misfortunes.—This letter will be delivered into your own hands by an adjutant of my palace. Its purport is to demand from you prompt reparation, and such as I have a right to expect, from the sentiments you have always entertained for me. A French officer has been beaten in the road of Tunis by one of your officers rais. The agent of the republic has demanded satisfaction and could not obtain it. Two brigs of war have been taken by your corsairs, which carried them to Algiers, and have retarded them on their voyage. A Neapolitan vessel has been seized by your corsairs in the road of Hieres, by which act the French territory has been violated. In short, of the vessel which was cast away last winter on your coast, 150 men are still missing, detained in the hands of Barbarians. I demand reparation from you for all these grievances: and not doubting but that you will take all the measures which I should take in similar circumstances, I dispatch a vessel to bring home to France the 150 missing men. I beseech you moreover to mistrust those of your ministers who are enemies to France; you cannot have greater enemies, and if I desire to live in peace with you, it is essential, that you should preserve the good understanding about to be re-established, which alone can maintain you in that rank and prosperity you now enjoy: for God has decreed the punishment of all those who are unjust towards me.

"If you wish to live in friendship with me, you must not expect to treat me as a feeble power; you must cause the French flag to be respected, as likewise that of the Italian republic, which has nominated me its chief, and you must make me reparation for all the injuries which I have sustained. This letter being intended for no other purpose, I request you to read it yourself, with attention, and let me know by return of the officer I send you, the resolution you mean to take."

Whatever were the secret intentions of the dey, he only testified the desire of living in a good understanding with the French republic. "I wish always to be," says he, "the friend of Buonaparte."

He promised and actually gave every satisfaction that was demanded.

To render particular homage to the first consul, in the person of his envoy, he was disposed even to dispense with the ordinary forms, and contrary to the immemorial usages of the regency, he received, in the most magnificent hall of his palace, the officer of the palace, the charge d'affaires of the republic, the contre-admiral Leiſſegues and his numerous etat-major. It was in that place, that he delivered to general Hullin the anſwer which he had prepared for the firſt conſul, in ſubſtance as follows:

"In the name of the only God, the God of mankind, our maſter the illuſtrious and magnificent lord Muſtapha Pacha, dey of Algiers, whom God preſerve in glory.

"To our friend Buonaparte, firſt conſul of the republic of France, preſident of the Italian republic.

"I ſalute you, the peace of God be with you.

"Henceforth, our friend, I inform you that I have received your letter dated the 29th Meſſidor. I have read it; it was delivered to me by the general of your palace, and your vekil charge d'affaires, Dubois Thainville. I reply article by article.

1ſt. You complain of rais Ali-Tatar, although he is one of my jeldaches, I decreed that he ſhould be put to death. At the inſtant of the execution of his ſentence, your vekil demanded his pardon in your name, as a favour, and for your ſake, I have reprieved him.

2d. You demand from me the Neapolitan polacre, taken, you ſay, under the cannon of France. The particulars of this tranſaction, as reported to you, are not correct; but agreeably to your requeſt, I have delivered up eight Chriſtians compoſing its crew; I have ſurrendered them to your vekil.

3d. You demand a Neapolitan veſſel, which, it is ſaid, ſailed from Corfu with French clearances. No French papers were found on board; but in conformity to your deſire, I have ſet the crew at liberty, and have delivered them to your vekil.

4th. You demand the puniſhment of the rais who brought into this port two veſſels belonging to the French republic. According to your requeſt I have diſcharged him from my ſervice; but I muſt inform you that my rais know not how to read European characters; they are only acquainted with the uſual paſſports, and for this reaſon, it will be proper that the veſſels of war belonging to the French republic, ſhould make ſome ſignal, whereby they may be known by my corſairs.

5th. You demand 150 men, who you ſay are in my territories: there does not one of them exiſt. It was God's will that they all ſhould periſh, a circumſtance which occaſioned me great pain.

6th. You ſay there are certain perſons who give me councils that may embroil me with you. Our friendſhip is ſolid and ancient, and all thoſe who ſeek to embroil us, ſhall be diſappointed.

7th. You demand that I ſhall be the friend of the Italian republic. I will reſpect its flag the ſame as your own, as you deſire. Had any one elſe have made a ſimilar requeſt I would not have granted it for a million of dollars.

8th. You would not give me the 200,000 dollars which I demanded of you, as a recompence for the loſſes which I have ſuſtained for you.—Whether you will give them, or will not give them, we will, notwithſtaning, always be good friends.

9th. I have terminated with my friend Dubois Thainville, your vekil, every thing reſpecting the coral fiſhery, which your veſſels can immediately reſume. The African company ſhall enjoy the ſame prerogatives, which it formerly enjoyed; I have given orders to the bey of Conſtantine, to afford it every poſſible protection.

10th. I have ſatisfied you in every reſpect as you have deſired, in whatever you have demanded: In return, you will ſatisfy me, as I have ſatisfied you.

11th. Therefore, I requeſt that you will give orders, that the nations, my enemies, may not navigate under your flag, nor that of the Italian republic; that there may be no further diſcuſſions between us, as I wiſh always to be friends with you.

12th. I have ordered my rais to reſpect the French flag at ſea. I will puniſh the firſt who ſhall bring a French veſſel into my ports.

If at any time hereafter any diſcuſſions ſhould be neceſſary between us, write to me direct, and every thing ſhall be amicably arranged.

I ſalute you: may God continue you in glory.

Algiers—this 13th of the moon Rabaid-Ewel, in the year of the Hegira 1217."

In concluding this report, I ought to inform the firſt conſul, that the adjutant commandant of the palace, Hullin, and the contre-admiral Leſſegues, have fulfilled the commiſſion entruſted to them, with dignity, firmneſs and circumſpection.

TRANSLATION.

Official note delivered by the reis effendi, to Alexander Stratton, Eſq; at a conference in his excellency's houſe on the Canal, the 29th July, 1802.

It behooves the character of true friendſhip and ſincere regard, to promote with cheerfulneſs all ſuch affairs and objects as may be reciprocally uſeful, and may have a rank among the ſalutary fruits of thoſe ſteady bonds of alliance and perfect good harmony which happily ſubſiſt between the Sublime Porte and the court of Great-Britain; and as permiſſion has heretofore been granted for the Engliſh merchant ſhips to navigate in the Black Sea, for the purpoſe of trade, the ſame having been a voluntary trait of his Imperial majeſty's own gracious heart, as more amply appears by an official note preſented to our friend the Engliſh miniſter reſiding at the Sublime Porte, dated 3 Gemaziel, Ahir, 1214—this preſent "I take," (official note) is iſſued; the Imperial Ottoman court hereby engaging that the ſame treatment ſhall be obſerved towards the Engliſh merchant ſhips coming to that ſea, as if offered to the ſhips of powers moſt favoured by the Sublime Porte, on the ſcore of that navigation.

NEW-YORK, October 26.

Captain Wilſon, of the ſhip Cotton Planter, informs us that on the 8th Auguſt a fleet of French tranſports ſailed from Cadiz under a convoy of a cutter brig for St. Domingo or Louiſiana. It was ſaid they had 10,000 men on board, under command of a general who had ſeen much active ſervice in Europe. Theſe troops were all from the army of Italy. A French 20 gun ſhip and cutter brig, bound to Tobago with a French governor on board for that iſland; 2 other 20 gun ſhips, and a cutter brig from France, bound for Toulon to join a fleet ſaid to be deſtined to act againſt the Turks, had alſo left Cadiz previous to the ſailing of the Cotton Planter.

PHILADELPHIA, October 29.

Extract of a letter from a mercantile houſe in Liverpool, to their correſpondent in this city, dated Sept. 16, 1802.

"On Tueſday laſt, a dreadful FIRE broke out in the warehouſes ranging along the eaſt ſide of St. George's Dock, and we are extremely concerned to inform you, that ſeventeen of the moſt valuable have been totally deſtroyed, with nearly the whole of the property therein contained, conſiſting chiefly of rum, ſugar, coffee, cotton, grain, flour, hemp and tallow. The loſs ſuſtained in conſequence is very great, but no accurate calculation can yet be made of its amount.

"Few, however, ſtate it at leſs than half a million, ſome ſuppoſe it muſt exceed a million, and it is currently reported that not one half of the property is inſured.—It is alſo ſaid that about one half of the rooms were occupied with grain and flour; if ſo the quantity conſumed may be equal to 250,000 buſhels; of other articles the bulk conſiſted of rum, ſugar and cotton."

LOUISVILE, (Ken.) September 30.

BALTIMORE, October 30.

Arrived this day, in the ſhip London Packet, from Havre-de-Grace, THOMAS PAINE, author of the Age of Reaſon, &c.

From the George-town (S. C.) Gazette of Oct. 16.

"On Saturday laſt information was brought to this town, that a number of negroes had been landed at Long Bay, from a French frigate, which has been lately ſeen off the coaſt, and that the people of Waccamaw were conſequently in a ſtate of alarm. This information, coming from a ſource which admitted of very little doubt, cauſed the officers commanding in town to collect their men immediately, many of whom marched that evening, and others who were collected from the country, followed them on Monday evening. Thoſe who ſet off on Sunday evening, had almoſt reached the place where the landing was ſaid to have been effected, when they were informed that the alarm was falſe. It appears to have originated from a French negroe's having been taken up in the night, near Long Bay, who is ſuppoſed to be a runaway. We are ſorry to ſtate, that the country for ſome diſtance above this place was alarmed, and the men were actually on their march.

"It is much to the honour of our citizens that they turned out to a man, although ſome of them had juſt riſen from a bed of ſickneſs, but it is to be feared, that ſuch falſe alarms will have a tendency to prevent the like attention to duty when danger is actually at hand. We underſtand that the buſineſs will undergo an inveſtigation."

PROPOSALS

By DAVID BROWN, No. 372, North Third-ſtreet Philadelphia,

FOR PUBLISHING BY SUBSCRIPTION,

A COMPENDIUM OF NATURAL PHILOSOPHY:

IN FIVE VOLUMES.

BY JOHN WESLEY, A. M.

"Theſe are thy glorious works, Parent of Good,
"Almighty! Thine this univerſal frame,
"Thus wond'rous fair! Thyſelf how wond'rous
"then!"

THE erudition of Mr. Weſley ſtands in competition with the firſt writers of the preſent age. He was of a deep penetrating mind—matured by long experience in ſcientific ſtudies. He willingly embraced any toil which might promote the wiſdom and happineſs of mankind. With this view, he compiled this SYSTEM OF NATURAL PHILOSOPHY.

This work is not too diffuſe, not expreſſed in many words, but compriſed in ſo moderate a compaſs, as not to require any large expence, either of time or money—Not maimed or imperfect; but containing whatever is known with any degree of certainty, either with regard to the earth or the heavens, and this in the plaineſt dreſs; ſimply and nakedly expreſt, in the moſt clear, eaſy, and intelligible manner, that the nature of things would allow—To which are added, the moſt valuable diſcoveries both of our own and the foreign ſocieties, ancient and modern. The learned have admired this performance as a moſt uſeful and inſtructive compendium.

CONDITIONS.

I. This work will be neatly printed, with a new type, on fine medium paper, in five volumes, each volume containing nearly four hundred pages, duodecimo.

II. A volume will be publiſhed every three months, neatly bound and lettered, payable on delivery, 1 dollar and 40 cents.

III. Subſcribers names will be annexed to the laſt volume.

IV. An elegant portrait of the author will be given as a frontiſpiece, executed by the firſt American artiſt.

V. As ſoon as ſufficient encouragement is met with, the work ſhall be put to preſs.

VI. Thoſe who obtain ten ſubſcribers, and are reſponſible for their payment, ſhall receive one copy gratis.

 Subſcriptions received at this office. 8
